

Consequences

If for any reason you find yourself on the wrong side of the law there can be consequences for everyone, this can include not only the direct victims of your crime but also your family, friends and even the community that you live in.

The consequences of your actions can be very serious and if you do break the law the Police may be involved, as may the courts and Youth Offending Service.

You may find that there are far more serious consequences that can affect you and your future if you decide to break the law.

Children over the age of 10 years can be dealt with by the Police and courts.

Think very carefully of the consequences before you do something that may land you in trouble.
